EDITORIAL.

"A mighty hand from an exhaustless Urn, Pours forth the never-ending flood of years Among the nations.

HAT flood has borne us into the editorial chair, and we have the pleasure of presenting to all friends of the M. A. C., the tenth annual volume of the Index.

We have endeavored to perpetuate all the valuable features of former issues, and to introduce such new ones as seemed advisable. We wish, not only to make the INDEX a full and exact catalogue, but also to make it a reliable exponent of student life.

The publication of the Index is fast coming to be the anticipated event of the Junior year, to all under-classmen. May each year add new interest to the work. Let every volume be an advance, in symmetry and perfection, upon the preceding, and the Index will be an honor both to the college and to the class publishing it.

The growth of the INDEX has been rapid, not only in size but in quality. The first volume was published in 1869-70. This was a thin pamphlet of twenty-eight pages, containing only the class communications, the members of the college societies, and those of the four classes. It was entirely lacking in all that miscellaneous matter, which forms such a prominent part of later numbers.

Time has marked out its usual changes during the year, but happily most of these have been to our own advantage. We have had a live head, whose invigorating influence has been felt by college and student. Order and neatness have sprung into life, the grass grows greener and the flower takes on a more delicate tint now that its lover is near. Ay, and even we cannot fail to catch the inspiration and love the music of the flowers. Students! we can well be proud of our Prex, and in every mental, moral and natural field, strive by our faithfulness to win the esteem of him, whose worth is felt in other lands than our own.

Our college has lost this year the services of Dr. Packard, "Lecturer upon Useful and Injurious Insects," the Doctor having been called to a new field of labor. We feel the loss keenly as the opportunity of hearing his lectures was one of the privileges of the Junior year. It is earnestly to be hoped that the Trustees will soon fill his place, although they cannot make it good. After glancing at the amount of damage annually wrought on a few farm crops only, by the ravages of such insects as the potato beetle, phylloxera, the grasshopper and the cabbage fly, which cause an annual loss of tens of millions of dollars, no one in the Commonwealth is able to say that the study of the habits of these insects, and of the means of protecting ourselves from their attacks, is not of the most vital importance in the education of the "embryo farmer."

Lieutenant Totten left college at the end of the Summer term, and is now with his regiment on the "Plains." He was an officer who thoroughly understood his duties, and one who was ever on the alert to execute them in a manner most beneficial to the interests of the college. One does not have to search far to discover improvements introduced by him in and around college. Whatever he touched seemed instinctively to drop into mathematical form and arrangement. Most flattering to himself were the changes that he introduced in the dress and appearance of the cadets. No, military discipline and study is one of the most essential parts of the education gained at the M. A. C.

No successor having been appointed by the Government at the commencement of the Fall term, the Faculty secured the services of Captain Smith. He adopted a most excellent practice by requiring all upper classmen to act as squad drill masters of the Freshmen. By this course those men that assist in the drill will be made more careful and reserved in their conduct, and far better fitted to perform their duties in the Battalion. Captain Smith was subsequently relieved by Lieutenant Charles Morris, detailed for this place by the President of the United States. Commandant Morris has varied somewhat from the methods of Lieut. Totten, decreas-ing the number of companies and bringing the entire organization into as simple and compact form as possible.

The Editors would here express their regret that no more time is devoted to the study of the mental sciences. We most cordially indorse the words of the Professor of those sciences, that the supreme object of the Agricultural College is to "make farmers, men" in every sense of the word. Popular opinion has complained that such studies ought not to be in the curriculum of an agricultural college, that it would be of no after use to the graduates. We, as students, indignantly reject such comments, and demand of the college that facilities for such study be enlarged, rather than con-Most of us are from the farms, we are acquainted with the practical side of agriculture, we want to study the theory here, to gain a liberal education. If the design of the institution was to turn out plough-joggers, it has been a costly experiment. That class of farmers is in the majority already. Nothing further is required to fit a young man for that position than horny hands and an empty But a progressive farmer has other things to become acquainted with. He must not only be versed in physical philosophy, but, as he is dealing all the time with other men, buying and selling, he must understand human nature; and what is that but a department of mental or social philosophy.

The establishment of a nursery in connection with the Horticultural Department, should be noticed as a valuable source of instruction to the students. This was a needed supplement to the oral instruction in horticulture. Every one, during the Junior year at least, has "field practice" in all the different branches of fruit culture.

The students will not forget that they have lost one pleasant and genial friend this term, Mr. Johnson. Long and faithfully did he labor at the college. Always ready to take and return a joke, his team was a favored seat with every one. May success go with him in his new home.

The editorial would be incomplete were it to fail to speak of the departure of '78. Faculty and student may well think of that class with pride. Strong in numbers and vigorous in intellect, it maintained its precedence in college life to the end. The college was ably represented at the Boston University commencement, by Mr. C. F. Coburn of the graduating class. He was pronounced by competent critics to have been the best speaker of the day. The power with which he handled his subject, "The Poetry of Science," clearly proved that the students of an "Agricultural and Mechanical College" are not without poetic sentiment. '78 has many good friends among us yet. Let us remember the injunction of the poet,

"The friends thou hast and their adoption tried, Grapple to thy soul with hooks of steel."

In losing '78, we gained '82. By reason of the munificence of the Trustees in remitting tuition, '82 even surpasses her name in extent of numbers. As a class, they are bracing up under their duties right manfully, although > "His awkward gait, his introverted toes, Bent knees, round shoulders, and dejected looks, Procure him many a curse."

The Editors are sorry to send out the INDEX without the "class poem." Nature has not bestowed upon us the gift, vouchsafed to Homer, of expressing our thoughts in numbered sentences; neither do we feel it honorable to plagiarize the original meter of the preceding poet; and finally, if we were dishonest enough for that, we should still be without that grand inspiration of "those arithmetic signs, among the pines," that led on Seventy-nine to victory.

The editorial pen must now be laid aside and other duties taken up. If our friends are amused or instructed in looking through these pages, we shall have received our reward.

Many pleasant hours have been spent together by the Editors in the preparation. Hours and work, the recollection of which will long be stowed away in memory. Now we send it forth as a fitting souvenir of the class of '80.

SEVENTY NINE.

UR Senior year has flashed upon us like the sudden glare of a meteor, bringing with it the thought that in a few short months, we shall be launched into the great mass of humanity, thaping our destinies from its labyrinth. Its approach we have anticipated, and have been enlarging our resources for the last three years, to meet its responsibilities. Although we have not gone as far in our preparations as we might, nevertheless we are ready to face our tasks and perform our duties without faltering.

Fellow students! whether there be few or many, our good examples only, we ask you to follow; while our bad precepts, we beseech you, strive to avoid, and leave the way with at least one less stain for your successors.

We fully realize, as all must who have spent three years at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, that farming is the highest occupation of man. Commanding little respect as a calling, owing to the ignorance and lack of opportunities of its followers, agriculture needs the most zealous and well disciplined men, to raise it to a proper standard. To this end has our Alma Mater been established, and her sons are those to whom the plodding throng around us, are looking for help, to lift them from their undeserved abasement.

Our college has achieved so much already, that we may consider it a complete success; and triumph will follow triumph, if we work, remembering that the failures we encounter are but the guides which will lead us on to a more brilliant victory.

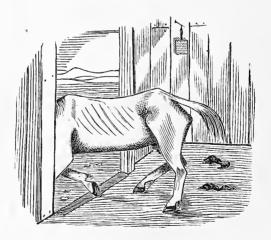

Many more duties devolve upon each individual since our class it so small. No one will deny but that our class badge (our lenses) is unique as well as useful. We have also departed from the prevailing custom, by planting class vines instead of trees.

Through the enterprise of our President a large and promising Freshman class has entered this year. This experiment shows that there are many young men, desirous of our agricultural education if it were brought within their reach, by free tuition. We trust that our Legislature will see wherein it errs and try to amend.

Already we look back upon the greater part of our college days with pleasure, and as years roll by, that pleasure will ever increase. A kind remembrance, shall we always cherish for our Faculty. We bid all a hearty farewell, for soon,

"We leave like those volcanic stones our precious Alma Mater, But will keep dropping in again to see the dear old crater."

EIGHTY.

EFRESHED by our long rest from study, again we enter upon the duties of college life, with new zeal for the work before us. The routine of duty comes so natural that we scarcely realize the interruption of vacation, save from its beneficial results, and the change wrought in our absence. Yes, there are changes, we do not find everything as when we left. This is most noticeable, first, in our own class. While it was permitted us to welcome to our ranks one or two new members during the past year, still our numbers are perceptibly diminished. In vain we look for all the old familiar faces to reappear, and for a moment, a shade of sadness steals over the bright horizon of our hopes, as we realize how many of the little band who first plighted faith and honor in the cause of Eighty, have fallen by the way. But there is no time for repining. The necessity of the hour only demands a stronger effort and more strenuous action on the part of those who are left. It remains for us to decide whether we shall, or shall not, attain the summit of our ambition, and realize the consummation of the hopes which have ever been the beacon of our class, guiding us on our course by its strong, steady and unceasing light.

Another change, a source of deep regret, is the loss of our former commandant. We mention this with all honor due him, who now fills his place, but it would be impossible for us to transfer, at once, the esteem and regard formed by so long, pleasant and profitable relations as existed between commandant and cadets, to one ever so worthy of the same.

And now we note another change, a source of pleasure rather than of regret, namely, our new title, the result of our past year's labor. It gives us great pleasure also to welcome so large a Freshman class, and we hope, as year by year they are elevated in college rank, that the advantages of education and culture, which it is their good fortune to enjoy, may tend to develop that trait of character, so pleasing in those on whom the world has bestowed its honors, a just appreciation of the worth and merits of their fellows; not disdaining nor patronizing those who are still below them. And in the spirit of progress rather than of self glory, we urge them to greater achievements than we have made, or indeed any preceding class, since we can point them to nothing short of perfection.

EIGHTY ONE.

S we sit down to contribute our little item to your interesting columns, memories of our eventful Freshman year crowd upon us. But lest we weary you, we will refrain from enumerating those events, which are of interest only to us, and cite those which are of more general importance.

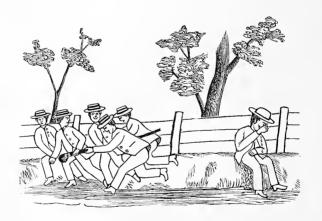

Of the twenty-four, who tremblingly sought admission to our class, only two have left; three others, dissatisfied with the result of their labors, have decided to review their studies with Eighty-two. Success be with you, brothers, and may your industry enable you to regain a place in our ranks. Our best wishes go with those, whose aspirations were too great, and whose brains were too powerful to keep them within our limits.

After considerable debate we decided upon a cane, as a class emblem; and now, were it not that the greed of the Freshman is greater than his modesty, you might see several of our number gracefully swinging the finest canes that ever college boys possessed. No, "Freshie," you must not be too ventursome. Have compassion on our pockets. They are already only too well filled with the pieces of your walking sticks. We are glad to see so many of you, coming to fill our places, and we note with pain that one of your number has left you. We tried hard to make it pleasant for him, packing him off to bed with the tenderness of a mamma; and when one poor fellow was shedding tears of homesickness, we kindly extinguished his light, that he might not see himself cry.

Dear college mates, take example from us, and when another class shall enter, be tender with them, remembering that version of the Golden Rule which says, "As others do unto you, even so do ye unto them."

And now, classmates, we have fairly commenced our Sophomore year. To many of us, it is the last in college. Who knows but that it is our last on earth! Let us then be up and doing, and may each moment add a polish to the monument of our character.

EIGHTY TWO.

ITH pleasure, do we present our first contribution to the Index. Our stay in the M. A. C. has been so short, that we scarcely have been initiated into the common routine of college life. But the "greenness," which characterizes all Freshmen, and which is greatly magnified by the compound microscopic lens of a Senior's eye, begins gradually to wear off, and if nothing serious happens, we expect soon to take up a contribution to procure wooden tooth-picks for the Senior class.

Our number exceeds eighty. We are mostly men whose thirst for knowledge brought us here; rather than the desire to pass away time. Our muscular power, we think, offsets our "greenness." This was fully demonstrated in the "Grand Rush," where Sophomore refinement was overpowered by Freshman muscle. Just here we would thank the Juniors for their instruction in some of the arts of college life. We appreciate their kindness.

One thing very noticeable here, is Sophomore bravery, as exhibited in monopolizing Freshman canes. We admire true courage. It is an honor to every one. But does manly courage consist in oppressing the weak? Our most worthy Sophomores seem to have considered it as such, when two or three of their number pounced upon one poor Freshman, relieving him of his cane, and sawing it into "matchblocks." However the class of Eighty-two has a great deal of charity, and is patiently waiting for the time, when Sophomore knowledge shall become so extensive, as to enable them to understand that the word "Hero," has a deeper signification, than "putting Freshmen to bed" and "snagging" canes.

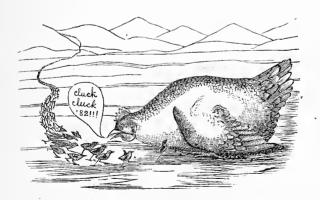

Friendship is very valuable. It strengthens the weak, urges forward the disheartened, brings one student in closer sympathy with his classmates; in short, it makes men. Let us furbish this golden link by which the human race is united. As Freshmen, we have looked around on the vastness of the work before us; but we cherish deeply the hope that it may be done well. Often we wish that the veil of futurity might be swept away and disclose that which is in store for us; but kind Providence has forbidden it, and we must wait for the turning of Fortune's wheel.

We hope and trust that the class of Eighty-two will chisel her name in tablets of honor, that when she shall lay aside her mantle, and throw down her mask and foils, other classmen may seize the tried blades, and perpetuate the glory of our Alma Mater.

Let other classmen cheer their band, With armor tried and true, Let poets chant their praises bland; We'll shout for Eighty-two.

TARGET PRACTICE.

Parents should be very careful about giving their children firearms, when they start off for college, although it is the common opinion that pistols are needed in the college outfit. A serious affair happened here, not long ago, as seen from the above. The little Freshman, becoming alarmed, discharged his pistol, the ball passing through the door and the partition of the adjoining room and lodging in a pair of pants. We might logically prove what the result might have been, had the owner been in in the aforesaid pants. The result was however, that on the following night, a big boulder came crashing through into the room, completely demolishing the door. Damage, $5.00. Charge it.

A ROAST.

OW when the days of pleasure and sport were all numbered and ended, there were gathered together a goodly number of youths, in so much that they chinned among themselves, saying, "where shall we abide this night," for there was no room in the building, and it came to pass in those days there went out a decree from William the Great, that every man should take unto nimself a chum. Now there was at this time living in No. 6 S. C., a Senior, short of stature but goodly to look upon, to him was meted out a Freshman, Luke by name, the same did not grow in wisdom nor did he find grace in the eyes of the Senior. Now when two weeks had already passed the Senior's wrath was kindled within him and he bethought himself, saying, "what shall I do that I may rid myself of this evil?" This will I do, I will pull up his carpets and cast his furniture from among mine, yea, I will cause him to take up his bed and walk, and the thought pleased him so he set himself to accomplish the task, and labored till the going down of the sun. Now it so happened that there was at this time living in the room above a trusty servant of William the Great, David by name, a man after his own heart, a man of valor and discretion, one in whom his soul delighted and whom he had made ruler over all things from the ash pan to the enlightened Senior. Behold while it was yet day this same David heard the rumor of a great noise coming from below, and stirred himself and went down and stood in the door-way, and cried with a loud voice, saying, "what do'st thou here, hast thou not read the decree, that has been decreed, do'st thou not fear him who can read thy character even by the way thou wearest thy hat, hast power over all thy future life whether thou shalt prosper in this world or not, yea verily, who can send the hence by his slightest breath, dost thou not fear him I say? But why stand ye here idle? bestir thyself to make amends for the evil thou hast done, but I will have respect to thine age and position, I will give till the going down of the morrow's sun to put back all thy Freshman's goods, his furniture, his carpet, yea all that thou has moved, but woe be to thee oh Senior, if when I come thou shalt not have obeyed my commands that I commanded thee, it were better for thee if thou hadst never For I swear by the life of William the Great, that if at my coming, everything be not replaced, be it even a tack, thou and thy furniture, thy books and everything that that thou hast shall be removed, that this room that knows thee now shall know thee no more forever." And it came to pass when he had made an end of speaking that the Senior's knees smote one against the other and his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth, so that what he would say he could not. Now the next day very early in the morning, he rose up even while it was yet dark and labored hard and long so that the sweat stood out upon him, that it might be well with him, when David should again appear, for he feared both William the Great and his servant David. HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE.

E gladly contribute what we are able, to the perpetuation of the history of the M. A. C. A yearly schedule of events can not but be of interest to all connected with the college. Especially must this be the case with those who are to become connected with the college in future years. 1878 has been a year barren in some respects of those occurrences which one would expect to find in a college history.

$1,000 was given for the purpose of forming an experimental station. An association was formed and the money divided up as follows: $500 to test the feasibility of raising Sorghum and manufacturing sugar and syrup from it. $200 to test the nutritive value of Corn raised in different sections of the Union. $100 to test the purity and germinating power of various seeds. $100 for making practical tests with the lycimetre. The remaining $100 to be spent in ascertaining the effect of different kinds of green fodder in the quality of the butter.

A lycimetre was put in on the field in front of Prof. Stockbridge's. Trustees offer one hundred and fifty scholarships.

THE SECOND ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT

OF THE

M. A. C. C.

EMEMBERING with pleasure our experiences at Camp William Knowlton, upon reassembling this Fall, the desire was early expressed of renewing the enjoyments of camp life. Many difficulties seemed to block the way to the fulfillment of this wish. Daily meetings were held to enkindle enthusiasm, and to work out some definite plan of operation. After having become thoroughly in earnest ourselves, we laid siege to the President, to obtain his consent and sanction. Here we encountered many objections. The people of the state were already looking with displeasure upon the extent of the Military influence at the college, this would increase their distrust; an expedition of this kind would sadly interfere with regular duties, etc., etc.

Wearied out with waiting, we fell asleep, and while we slept our thoughts were woven into a vivid dream. It seemed as if the President had granted our request and that we were making preparations for departure.

But it must still be a long time before we could go, for here were eighty Freshmen who must be broken into military duties. With such incentives before them, however, they worked with alacrity. Special drills were instituted and private rooms were turned into drill halls, and such progress made that in a few weeks time, we felt that in the eternal fitness of things, we were ready to go into camp. As the previous year we had shunned the abodes of men, in pitching our camp, Springfield was now selected as our camp ground.

What a bustle and confusion of preparation! what a host of little articles must be looked up and put in readiness! Then there were our military trappings, that must be made spic and span; guns, cartridge boxes and bayonets that must be cleaned and burnished. At last all was ready, and on the morning of October 10, we fell into line in the best spirits. The signal gun was fired and the march to the cars commenced.

At Springfield we pitched camp near a shady grove, just outside the city limits. Special squads were detailed to clean up the grounds and mark out the limits of the camp. Soon the snowy tent and the measured tread of the sentinel indicated to the stranger, that he was in the presence of a military camp. In such employment the remainder of the day was spent, until darkness brought his blessings of rest. But we were in too new and unusual a condition to enjoy much sleep. What with mounting sentinels, and the attempts to run the guard, sleep was pretty thoroughly banished from camp that night.

With day-break came the summons to arise and fall in for soup, around the camp-kettle. This was the only whole day we should be there. The battallion was formed at 9 A. M., and marched into the city, where it was reviewed and inspected by the Mayor. The remainder of the day was spent in visiting points of interest in the city. Especially did we keep our weather-eye open to the object of the expedition, and strive to increase our stock of military and scientific knowledge. We believe that in this respect, our success is fully equal to that attending our stay at Camp William Knowlton.

Night once more came, but it was not to be undisturbed. Some city roughs who had noted our arrival, determined to play a practical joke upon the Aggies. During the still small hours, the camp was suddenly awakened, by the shrill cry, "Corporal of the guard, post No. 1." In wild excitement, the men scrambled for their guns and equipments. A detachment was sent out to look into the origin of the disturbance. A charge was made on the maranders, who were making towards our stores, three or four were captured and taken back to the guard tent, and placed under close watch.

Camp was broken the next morning and we departed with our captives, but not till the camp had been christened, "Camp Morris." At the depot, we took leave of our prisoners, with many earnest wishes that they would not forget us. The train was boarded, and camp and camp-life were left behind. Happy were we to be once more on our way home. Songs and music, made the car resonant, and helped to wile away the time. The other passengers might not have been favorably impressed by our boisterous mirth. Be that as it may, we believed in "a time to laugh and a time to cry," and that the present was a suitable occasion to practice the former part of this maxim. But the moment was fast approaching when the time "to cry" would be at hand. We were bounding along at a rapid rate, when just ahead, a freight train came in sight, the distance was too short for either train to slacken its speed, and with one dreadful crash, they came together. Music and song ceased, and thought and action alike died away.

"Twas all a dream. Imagination had been busily at work in the drowsy body, but this fatal termination of the story could not be borne in quietness; the limbs once more obeyed the will, and sense returned. The car was transformed into a bed-room; the collision had occurred between a window and a rock. And now with shivering limbs, the idle dreamer was investigating the damage, and meditating upon "how vain a delusion" had been preying upon him.

Suffice it to say, that although our attempts to go on a military expedition, have failed this Fall, still it is our earnest hope, that in the sunny days of the coming Spring, our Commandant will allow us to realize some of these visions of the night.

ALMA MATER.

THE FUTURE.

LMA Mater! dear to the heart of the Alumnus are the memories associated with the name; never from his mind can the recollections of his college career be effaced; and in living over again the days passed at the old college home he is led to muse upon its future, and with interest rekindled, resolve that no lack of support on his part shall detract from the glory of his loved Alma Mater.

Students, it is by you that our college is to be judged and her future will be largely what you make it; the time rapidly approaches when you will leave her hospitable walls, and take your places in the niche, long waiting, for men educated in the science of agriculture, able to read understandingly the books of nature. Now is the time for preparation, neglect it not.

Though financial causes have necessitated a reduction in the corps of instructors, remember that the institution is in the hands of those who have your, and its greatest good at heart, and that they feel the loss as deeply as you, and will surely fill the vacancies in the Faculty at the earliest practicable moment. Whatever may be your personal estimate of a professor's proficiency in his department, remember that he received the instruction he seeks to impart to you, while you were still under the maternal care; and may, except in rare instances, be supposed qualified to teach you. The Faculty are sowing the seed, if your preparation was sufficient, and your cultivation is thorough, there are abundant harvests in store for you. Undergraduates, see to it that you so repay the fostering care of Alma Mater, that in after years she may not only never be ashamed of your relationship to her, but may be proud of her sons.

Alumni of the M. A. C., the time will come when the mantles of the present officers of the college will fall on you; already two of your members are connected with the institution as instructors. None are so well acquainted with the resources, needs and possibilities of our college as we, and surely, no one can be more interested in its success; it is therefore not only our right, to be represented on the Board of Trustees, but the welfare of the college demands it, the present members, have been surrounded with difficulties almost insurmountable; their duties have been arduous, yet too often thanklessly received, in some instances their self sacrificing interest in the college commands our highest praise; yet the greatest success of the institution can only be secured through the concerted action of the Alumni and Trustees; such action can best be secured through Alumni representation on the Board. The time has already arrived, when vacancies should be filled from our number; bear this fact in mind, that when called upon to select a guardian for our Alma Mater the best man, the one having the deepest interest in her success, and best able to carry his, and our ideas into force, may be chosen.

There are rumors, and we fear not groundless ones, that the President who has presided over the affairs of the Massachusetts Agricultural College from its infancy, is about to leave us; should the rumors result in facts, where can a successor be found? Alumni this is a question deeply interesting to you, give it the thought its importance demands, for on its successful solution may depend the future weal or woe of our cherished institution.

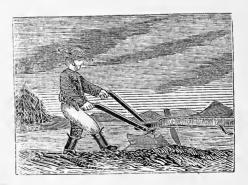

The Trustees have generously granted a free scholarship to each Alumnus, and thus to a certain extent placed the responsibility for the welfare of our Alma Mater upon us, and events have already proved the wisdom of this course; nobly have the Alumni responded to this call for a manifestation of their interest in the college, and as a result, the class of '82 is nearly double the size of any predecessor. The complaint can no longer be made, that there is no call for the institution; that farmers' sons refuse to enter its halls, or that it fails in its object, and does not educate farmers. Fully twenty-five per cent. of its graduates are actively engaged on the farm, while others are occupied with such kindred pursuits, as teaching agriculture, or editing agricultural papers; and many others will eventually return to the farm to put into practice the knowledge acquired at the M. A. C. In view of these facts it is possible that the college may soon ask the Legislature to place the farmers' institution on a firm basis, that it may be self-supporting while furnishing free tuition to the young men of Massachusetts. If such action should be crowned with success, the Alumni must see that two so important chairs as those of Veterinary, and Mental Science be reestablished.

"Our College" has experienced both cloud and sunshine; but we believe that it has demonstrated its worth, that the public appreciates the work it has accomplished, and recognizes the fact that it supplies a need long felt, till now never satisfied; that the Massachusetts College of Agriculture is worthy of the old "Bay State."

The maroon and white, the emblem of "an institution which teaches young men how to feed themselves, and how to defend themselves," must ever wave triumphant.

BOWKER'S

AMMONIATED

Food for Flowers,

IN-DOORS AND OUT.

A fertilizer, almost entirely soluble in water, free from odor, and as clean as sugar to handle.

It is made expressly for flowers grown in the house or garden. It contains nearly the same plant-food as stable dressing, and produces the same results, without giving off in the room that offensive and unhealthy odor which arises from the application of stable dressing. It produces a healthy, luxuriant growth, and induces early and generous flowering, and cannot in any way harm the plants if applied according to directions, which are VERY SIMPLE, and accompany each package. No lady who delights in flowers, and likes to see them do well and bloom abundantly, should be without the "Ammoniated Food." A table-spoonful dissolved in a gallon of water is a sufficient quantity for twenty ordinary plants like geraniums, applied once a week for three or four weeks; after that, not oftener than once a month. Trial packages sent by mail, post paid 25 cents.
